Partnering with CSR for Nature Conservation and Human Wellbeing

The conservation of biodiversity and natural habitats is very important for maintaining ecological balance, safeguarding human well-being and preventing outbreak of future pandemic. The North East India is a part of two global biodiversity hotspots, and conservation of its biodiversity will ensure abundance of oxygen and potable water, thereby ensuring wellbeing of the future generation of human race.

The Companies Act, 2013 has mandated companies to undertake activities aimed at ensuring environmental sustainability, ecological balance, protection of flora and fauna, animal welfare, flourishing agro forestry, conservation of natural resources and maintaining quality of soil, air and water, women empowerment, promotion of education, healthcare, sanitation, livelihood enhancement and such as stated in Schedule VII of the Act. Contributing to the conservation of biodiversity, and natural habitat is a welcome way to allot a company's mandatory Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR) spending.

We have been supported by various individual donors, funding agencies and key corporations like the German Development Bank-KFW, The Rufford Foundation, David Shepherd Wildlife Foundation, Whitley Fund for Nature, Panthera Inc., Tata Trust, Tata Capital, Give2Asia, Lea Associates South Asia and many such other corporate partners.
